Good evening learners, parents, and guardians,

Huntingdon Area High School will have a remote learning day on Friday, January 21st, Monday, January 24th, and Tuesday, January 25th, 2022. This is in response to additional confirmed positive Covid-19 cases in the school building and to help stop the spread and to keep our school community safe.

Please note that this remote learning day only applies to HAHS, not to other HASD school buildings.

For the remote learning days, please note the key points listed below:

Schedule

- Learners will follow the remote learning schedule, which is posted on the reverse side of this memo. This is the same schedule that was utilized last year
- Class periods are scheduled from 9:30 am to 2:30 pm
- Learners can reach out to teachers for additional individual support from 7:30 - 9:30 am

Attendance

- Students that are absent should submit a note for an excused absence to the high school office upon return to school

Communication of Assignments/Live Sessions/Expectations

- It is extremely important that learners stay up to date with assignments and expectations
- Teachers may structure their class periods to facilitate their lessons best, based upon the content that has been planned to be delivered
- See below for more detailed remote learning expectations

HCCTC

- HCCTC learners will have a remote day for HAHS and the HCCTC for each of these three dates

Wifi Access

- HS Building parking lots are available to access the internet for students

Revised 1/19/22

HAHS Remote Learning Expectations

- Schedule
 - Shared below is the period by period schedule (9:30 am - 2:30 pm) for live sessions during remote days. This is the same schedule that we utilized last school year. Learners have access to this schedule in their Grade Level Google Classroom
 - HAHS 2021-2022 Remote Learning Schedule - Revised 1/19/22
- Agendas and Work Completion
 - It is extremely important that learners stay up to date with assignments and expectations.
 - Students must continue with their assignments during remote learning. Teachers will briefly review content upon return to the classroom, but there will be a short deadline for any missing work
 - Teachers share and review work with learners to be completed each week at the start of the week. This information can be found in the weekly agendas that are shared in each class's Google Classroom
 - This information should be the first place that learners review when determining what work needs to be reviewed and completed each day/week
 - Teachers can adjust the agenda when needed. Learners should reach out to teachers with any questions
 - Teachers are mindful of disruptions and transitions between learning models . Students and families must communicate any difficulties with teachers so that they can support the learners in a timely manner. The morning intervention time during remote learning is a great way for learners to follow-up with questions that they may have encountered if they were working the evening prior
- Morning Intervention/Review Time and Independent Learning Time
 - If your student is struggling with academics and needs extra support, our teachers will be available each morning from 8:00 - 9:25 am. Teachers can set-up individual or small group Zoom sessions.
 - Students and/or families should contact teachers to set up sessions as needed. Teachers may also reach out regarding these sessions
 - This support is available any time we are in remote learning, unless a faculty meeting is scheduled
 - Independent Learning Time
 - The morning time prior to live sessions beginning at 9:30 am should also be spent by learners completing assignments and reviewing content . Students will need to utilize this time to adequately practice new learning that may not be feasible during the period by period live sessions
 - Students have flexibility to structure their independent learning time during remote learning. However, the morning timeframe is when teachers will have dedicated time to support learners with questions. This time is when learners should be reaching out with questions that may have arisen from the prior day or evening
- Live Session Expectations
 - Learner attendance during live sessions is very important! Learners that cannot attend live sessions should be in communication with their teachers. Teachers will be available to learners daily as indicated by the period by period schedule
 - Class periods should mimic what is expected during the classroom. Therefore, teachers will be available each day, though that does not mean that live instruction will be taking place for the entire period, or every day during the period, depending upon the timeframe for remote learning
 - Class periods can be used for: introducing new content; reviewing agenda items, assignments, and expectations; providing time for practice work, quizzes, or tests; presenting pre-recorded lessons; and organizing small and individual groups for follow-ups

- Note: Teachers will be available to meet with learners via Zoom throughout the designated period. Teachers will not necessarily be presenting whole-group instruction throughout the period. Other activities, such as providing time for independent practice, taking assessments, and reviewing recorded content can be utilized during this time. Additional activities help to prevent “Zoom fatigue,” while also providing time during the day for work completion

Thank you to everyone’s hard work as we continue to navigate the Covid-19 pandemic together. Keep that Bearcat Pride!
